The three children love animals, but haven't any of their own - until they are given a secret to look after. Then other problem pets begin to arrive. Soon Green Meadows turns into an animal home, and Francis, Clare and Sam are having adventures more exciting than they thought possible.

The Children At Green Meadows by Enid Blyton

It's a story about a family that are suffering from financial difficulties after the father was injured in the war. The story is of how the children help the people on the new housing estate by looking after their animals, and in return how those people help them. Very sweet story, perfect for people that love animals.

The Children at Green Meadows. The title of this book doesn't give much away, and it could be a story about just about anything. It would probably be classed as one of her 'family' books, I have it on the shelf beside The Family at Red-Roofs and House-at-the-Corner. It could also be considered as an animal book, as that is the other main theme.
